Customer Categories: (Check all that apply)

Food Service

Businesses that prepare and serve meals or beverages for immediate consumption outside the home (e.g., cafeterias, catering, institutional dining).

Quick Serve Restaurant (QSR)

Food service establishments that provide quick, convenient meals with limited service, commonly known as fast-food restaurants.

Retail

Grocery stores, supermarkets, club stores, and other outlets that sell packaged or fresh meat products directly to consumers for preparation and consumption at home.

Commodity Export

Companies that purchase meat products, typically in bulk or wholesale, for shipment and resale in international markets.

Consumer Direct

Sales channels that deliver meat products directly to individual consumers through online platforms, subscriptions, or farm-direct programs.

Pet Food

Companies that produce pet food or treats using meat products or by-products as ingredients.

Rendering

Businesses that process animal by-products, trim, fat, and inedible meat materials into usable products such as tallow, meat and bone meal, and other industrial or feed ingredients.

Distributor

Intermediary companies that purchase meat products and resell them to food service operators, retailers, or other businesses, providing logistics, storage, and delivery services rather than selling directly to end consumers.

Wholesaler

Businesses that purchase meat products in large volumes and resell them to other companies—such as retailers, processors, manufacturers, or secondary distributors—without substantially altering the product. These wholesalers focus on bulk trading, inventory management, and efficient distribution across regional or national markets, rather than supplying meals or ingredients for food service operations.
